Described by Andy Robinson as 'the best broken field runner in the Scottish squad', Max is an attacking threat from all over the pitch. He has the ability to break defences with good footwork and top class acceleration. After suffering a back injury and having a stint as a professional golfer, Max could not stay away from his home town of Glasgow and returned to rugby in 2007.

In contrast to his attacking flair, off the field Max is very relaxed character, fun and witty. Max continues to keep grounded and work hard, shining during the 2011 6 Nations Campaign and having a successful RWC playing in all four of Scotland's matches. His main focus now turns to the 2012 Six Nations and continuing to make an impact at new club Castres.
